The Railway Dis-Service

Editorial

Under the new winter schedule of the Canadian National Railroads, the Transcontinental Limited, both eastbound and westbound will make Chauvin and Edgerton flag stops for the convenience of passengers to and from Edmonton and Winnipeg, and presumably to points more distant. For this "concession" we all should, without doubt, be duly thankful.

A BROKEN PLEDGE

Quite possibly the one who occupies the seat of power at Toronto entertains the idea that we have already forgotten the episode of early summer, when the Toronto authorities endeavoured to wipe Chauvin and Edgerton off the map by giving them an apology for a railroad service, and that we will now meekly submit to another curtailment, which may be followed by a complete withdrawal of facilities as soon as they can catch us in a sleepy mood.

It is not necessary for us to more than recall the united strenuous efforts of the Edmonton Board of Trade, the Edmonton Bulletin, the business men of Edgerton, and of Chauvin. The Chauvin Chronicle, and the District Passenger Agents at Edmonton and Saskatoon; and to state that the arguments then presented (doubtless on file at Toronto) are just as correct and forceful to-day as they were last summer. In fact at the present time the traffic is heavier and promises to exceed last winter.

AN INEFFECTIVE DIRECTORATE

The main reason why the Grand Trunk system was never a financial success was because it was "directed" mainly from London, England. The directors themselves were good business men, but lacking exact local knowledge they frequently made unwise decisions.

This kind of policy is being perpetrated to-day by the management at Toronto. They have looked at a map to confirm their impression that Halifax, Montreal, Toronto, a couple of lake ports, Winnipeg, Saskatoon, Edmonton and Vancouver provide the passengers and then set out to provide a train to "beat" the C.P.R. to a fast run. Doubtless they are regretting the necessity for such requirements as divisional points, where alas their pet train must stop.

With the certainty of big annual deficits for at least the next few years it is surprisingly strange that no effort is made by the Toronto officials to seek to adopt a policy which will encourage profitable travel. A policy which will make the present service more profitable by encouraging the ordinary man to travel with greater frequency.

THE TRAINS HAVE TO STOP!

Since making Chauvin a flag stop every train has been compelled to stop, and doubtless the train that will be able to pass without having to stop will be the exception rather than the rule. To the east of us Unity has been a flag point during the summer months, but most trains were compelled to stop. Most trains have stopped at Artland for water, and will continue to do so.

TURNING BUSINESS AWAY

It is absolutely suicidal for the National road to discourage Unity business from their road and to turn it over to the C.P.R. It is essentially bad business not to encourage traffic from Artland at which point they make water stops. It is poor business to discourage the natural westward trend of traffic between Chauvin, Edgerton and Wainwright and points beyond.

WHY NOT ENCOURAGE FOLKS TO TRAVEL?

On the occasion of the Oddfellows Anniversary Services one Sunday last summer, it was necessary to use "extreme persuasion" to induce the officials to stop at

CHAPTER IILEGISLATIVE POWER OF THE IMPERIAL GOVERNMENT THE PARLIAMENT

Every statute or law passed by the parliament of Great Britain and Ireland commences with these words "Be it enacted (that is made law) by the King's Most Excellent Majesty by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same as follows:—"

I have quoted these words because they show that the sovereign legislates for his realm in parliament, whilst he acts in his executive capacity in the privy council. The legislation he assents to as the first carries out in his executive capacity, branch of parliament he executes and through and by the advice of his sworn counsellors and officers appointed and sworn to execute and assent to the laws justly and faithfully, as I have already explained.

ORIGIN OF PARLIAMENT

The origin of parliament must be sought in the early assemblies of our Anglo-Saxon ancestors, who came from the sea-coasts of northern Germany and of Denmark. Their great council the Witenagemot of the times before the Norman conquest, was a national assembly of the great nobles, and ecclesiastical dignitaries summoned by the sovereign to consult and deliberate on the affairs of the kingdom.

After the Norman conquest it became known as the "Great Council." It had executive, legislative, and judicial powers. The king's special or permanent council to which I have referred above ("curia regis") was a part of this great council, and the whole formed the common council of the whole realm.

Eventually, the archbishops and other great ecclesiastics, or the lords spiritual, the nobles of the kingdom or the lords temporal, the former "House of Lords."

It was the great noble, Simon de Montfort, Earl of Leicester—a statesman much in advance of his age—who overthrew King Henry III on the battlefield of Lewes, who first summoned representatives of the towns and counties to meet bishops and nobles in a parliament in 1265. This scheme of Simon de Montfort was adopted by King Edward I in 1295, and has ever since formed the basis of the parliament of England.

Edward accepted this great council always thereafter known as parliament, as a most convenient instrument for raising taxes; it being the immemorial right of Englishmen to be taxed only by their own consent through their own representatives. The representative principle, as applied to government, is essentially English. Its origin can be traced to the "motus" or assemblies of the local divisions of England in early English times. In the municipal system of Canada, as I shall show later we have copied the names of these local divisions and of their public officers.

CHARTERS OF ENGLISH AND CANADIAN CONSTITUTIONAL LIBERTIES

From the days of Edward I, a wise monarch, there was for centuries a constant struggle between sovereign and commons for the mastery. The necessity for raising money by public taxation forced even the most arbitrary sovereigns to summon parliament sooner or later. At all times we find nobles and commons united to resist the unconstitutional efforts of kings to reign without the assistance of the national council.

Magna Carta, one of the great statutes of English liberty, written from King John, on the field of Runnymede in 1215, affirmed the fundamental principle that Englishmen could not be taxed without the consent of the national council.

Another great statute, known as the Petition of Right, prudently assented to by Charles I. four centuries later, when he could not resist the demands of parliament, again affirmed that no tax of any sort might be exacted without the consent of parliament.

The Bill of Rights, passed in 1689, when William and Mary became joint king and queen of England, was a strong declaration of the original rights of the people, violated by James II., who had fled the kingdom. This famous charter of constitution (Continued on page seven)

OUR NEW SERIALHOW CANADA IS GOVERNED

WORKING OF THE CABINET SYSTEM AND MEANING OF "KING IN COUNCIL"

When members of the house of commons, who are not privy councillors, are called upon to form a ministry, they must first be sworn of the privy council. (English privy councillors have the title of "Right Honourable"). Then they are placed in charge of certain departments or offices of government. One of these departments is entrusted with the supervision of the affairs of the colonial empire, and is called the secretary of state for the colonies. (This appointment is referred to in a later chapter).

The cabinet or inner council, is the body which discusses and decides all measures of public policy; i.e., the nature of the measures to be introduced into parliament, the relations of England with foreign countries, treaties of peace, declarations of war, questions affecting the government of Great Britain and Ireland, India and the dependencies, important appointments, and the countless matters that devolve on the government of a great nation. Its deliberations are held in secret, and when it reaches a conclusion, we see the results in executive and administrative action, according to the well understood methods of the British constitution.

When the action of the head of the executive—that is of the sovereign—is necessary on any question of state, he is advised by the premier or responsible minister. The signature of the sovereign must also be given to the acts of the council—such as orders-in-council, certain appointments by commission and other acts of royal authority. (A commission is the written authority or order to perform certain duties; nearly all public officers, acting under the crown, have such an authority. It comes from the Latin word "committere," to place or trust a thing elsewhere).

In all cases any document, which is an act of the executive, must be countersigned by a responsible minister.

ister and may require to have the "great seal" or official evidence of the royal will affixed.

Order in council means an order passed by the sovereign by and with the advice of the privy council—though it is really only on the advice of those privy councillors who are members of the cabinet.

The king never acts alone. What he does in administration he does through the aid of a minister or ministry—who are members of the privy council. In fact every act of the sovereign in his executive and royal capacity is done on the advice of a sworn counsellor. If the advice is wrong or in violation of the law, the minister or ministry who gave it is open to the censure of parliament, or a particular minister may be brought before the ordinary courts of law.

Consequently the maxim that "the King can do no wrong" has arisen from the adoption of the following constitutional principles:—

1. That by no proceeding known to the law can the king be made personally responsible for any act done by him in his executive capacity.

2. That every executive act is the result of the deliberation of a sworn council, which advises the king thereof, and is alone responsible for the advice.

3. That no minister of the crown can bring forward an order of the crown as a defence or justification of an act that is in violation of law.

4. That the minister who gives the advice becomes responsible and liable to parliament.

The sovereign, it is well to mention here, except on formal occasions, has never sat in council with the cabinet since the days of George the First, who departed from the practice of royal predecessors on account of his ignorance of the English language.

What was in his case a matter of the settled practice. Now the sovereign—the same is true of the governor-general of the Dominion, and a lieutenant-governor of a province—is informed of the results of the deliberations of council, and has to approve of them before they can be effective, but takes no part in the deliberations themselves.

Studying Plans To Boost Meat Trade

Packers And Minister of Agriculture Confer in Alberta; Question of Marketing Discussed; Some Action Needed

A conference on the present condition of the meat industry in Alberta was held this morning between representatives of the three largest packing establishments in the province and the minister and officials of the department of agriculture. P. Burns and William Donald, for the Burns Company; S. W. Lund and J. M. Ryan for Swifts; A. G. Gainer for the Gainer Company; made up the delegation. W. L. Carlyle, of the Prince of Wales Ranch, and G. H. Hinton who are about to begin their work in selecting the livestock entries from Alberta for the International show in Chicago, were also present. Ways and means of improving the meat trade throughout the province were discussed at considerable length and some attention was also given to the question of marketing. It was the feeling of both the government officials and the packers that something could and should be done to put the industry on a better and more profitable basis, and the matter is to be further looked into from both sides.

The question of the day: "When will the election dates be announced?"

Fire Prevention Week In Alberta October 9 to 16

Fire preventive week, beginning, on Sunday, October 9th, and ending the following Saturday, has been appointed by order in council, and the proclamation is made through a special number of the Canadian Gazette. The proclamation calls attention to the fact that more than 300 persons in Canada annually lose their lives as a result of fire, in addition to which there is irreparable loss of money, labor, time and natural resources. This imposes a burdensome tax upon industry and thrift and substantially adds to the cost of living. Furthermore it is insisted that at least 80 per cent of the fires are due to inexcusable ignorance or neglect.

During the fire prevention week, citizens are recommended to inspect their homes and stores and other buildings, remove rubbish and otherwise reduce hazards. Hotels, theatres, asylums and hospitals should be inspected and any changes made necessary to perfect safety from fire. Fire drills for children and factory special instruction for teachers and the distribution of appropriate literature to pupils. Co-operation from municipal authorities as well as from those who make a livelihood in the forests is sought.

Crime Figures Show Big Increase

Year 1920 Reports 25 Percent Advance Over 1919; Minor Offences Mostly Responsible; Less Murder More Manslaughter

Crime in Canada during the year 1920 increased 25 percent over 1919, according to figures compiled by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. The increase was, however, for the most part in minor offences. During 1920, there were 35 convictions of murder as against 28 in the previous year; attempt to commit murder 19 as against 22, and manslaughter 43 as against 32. The convictions for murder numbered 11, the identical number in the previous year. For various forms of assault, the convictions numbered 2,220 in 1920, and 1,555 in 1919. Assaults on females increased from 22 to 70. What are technically known as aggravated assaults decreased from 471 to 455. The years in question date from October to September.

The number of convictions for burglary in 1920 was 2,073, compared with 2,420 in 1919. Highway robbery fell from 22 to 10 cases. There was a slight reduction, too, in convictions for theft. Convictions for arson fell from 43 to 34. Forgery cases showed an increase, the figures being 419 as against 377. Thirty-three persons were convicted of attempt to commit suicide, the number being only 20 in 1919. Conspiracy cases jumped from 6 to 58. There were 239 convictions of having illicit stills, a crime which does not appear in the 1919 column. Cases of drunkenness in 1920 numbered 39,769, as compared with 24,217, an increase of 64 percent and there was a large increase in violations of the liquor laws. During both years under review the convictions for vagrancy were a little less than 11,000. Fines paid on convictions for drunkenness during 1920 amounted to $315,099; and on account of breaches of prohibition and other liquor regulations $1,442,754.

The statistical branch reports that the percentage of convictions with respect to total number of charges for indictable offences is increasing year by year, but at the same time the sentences are becoming less and less severe. The number of habitual criminals, which had been on the decrease, is again rising. In 1919, however, there was a decrease in 1920 from 1919 of 2.3 percent. In 88 towns and cities of Canada there were 3,682 automobiles stolen, valued at $4,562,043. Or these the police recovered 3,534, leaving 148 these towns and cities recovered $4,814, of which 2,824 were recovered. In addition, the police found 3,225 bicycles which were not reported stolen and found 41 infants for 2,151 of them.

Photographs of prisoners were taken to the number of 5,247 and these prints taken numbered 12,499. During the year the police gave shelter to 22,297 persons and recovered 5,213 children that had strayed away. Miss M. Coleman, Miller, White-ridge, will be in Chauvin Tuesday and Wednesday, October 11, and 12. Miss Coleman will have on display Ladies and children's fashions in all the newest and latest shades. All moderately priced.

The Railway Dis-Service

Editorial Comment

Edgerton and Chauvin. The railroad netted over $700 for fares at the cost of four additional stops.

It is quite apparent that the railroad officials at Toronto are regardless of requirements of traffic in this district, that they are seeking the minimum of traffic by making transient travel impossible. They prefer to carry the least number of passengers to and from our local depots. They prefer that the express men should sit in arm chairs and have lots of time to look down town in place of unloading a quantity of shipments.

THE RAILROAD NEEDS THE REVENUE

We again present to the Toronto officials all the arguments used last summer. We add (though it should be quite unnecessary) that Chauvin and Edgerton have ever since the construction of the railroad been profitable points, and as such are entitled to consideration. We do not base our claim for such consideration upon our own needs solely but also in the interests of railroad finances because the present schedule is designed to bring a lesser revenue to the railroad's coffers.

Speaking on behalf of over twenty local organizations in this district who are doing their utmost to encourage interchange of visits and united gatherings from time to time at Chauvin, Edgerton and Wainwright, and also on behalf of the public in general who wish to attend the various public functions, many of which are held at Wainwright, we urge the railroad to make Chauvin, Artland and Edgerton regular stops.

Committee of Agrarian Council Hold Up By Absence of Alberta Members

The work of the special co-operative grain marketing committee appointed by the Canadian Council of Agriculture at the beginning of the year to devise a plan for marketing the crop of Western Canada through the council was considered at the meeting of the council this afternoon. The special committee was unable to meet immediately prior to this meeting of the council, owing to the unavoidable absence of its Alberta delegates. It was stated that the United Farmers of Alberta were not represented owing to the fact that nominating conventions are taking place at the present time in that province.

The secretary of the council, however reported on the work that had been done to date. The council instructed the special committee to meet again before the annual conventions of the western provincial organizations and to prepare a final report for presentation to the conventions which will be held in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta during the coming winter.

Fined For Not Sending Children To School

On Sept. 30th at the instance of the Department of Education, one of the rate payers of Manitou Lake Municipality was fined by J. W. Coe, J.P., for neglecting to send his child to school. Publicity is given to this case by way of warning to other parents who may be keeping their children at home without adequate reasons for so doing. In this connection it may be well to caution any one who hires or has working for them any child who should be at school. Such persons are running the risk of prosecution and if convicted may have to pay a heavy penalty. The Department is determined in the interests of the children that the act shall be enforced and instructions for such prosecutions are coming direct from them through the Provincial Police without consultation with the school trustees. Letters To The Editor

Seeks Co-Operation

Of The Parents

The Editor of the Chauvin Chronicle
Dear Sir:
If convenient, will you please publish the following remarks on the local school attendance.

It is regrettable, but a fact to be faced, that the daily attendance at the local schools during the past month and a half has been way below normal, especially among the older pupils in the high school grades.

Several causes contribute towards this, the chief one of course being the busy time of year.

However, in organizing a course of studies, the department of education laid out four years of two hundred days each. That is universally recognized I believe, as being about the minimum that should be asked. Various tests have been made over the continent and it has been found that a lesser attendance than 90 per cent of this number would lead to failure.

Locally, our work has been badly disorganized, the following rules will be adhered to during the coming year. Any student who is absent for more than 30 days of the school year will not be recommended for promotion, and further in event of passing without recommendation will not be accepted in the next grade if it is considered that the said pupil has not covered the ground of the previous grade.

Will the parents please help the teachers out in this matter? It may be a serious problem, but the end is worth the effort and it is an undoubted fact that the ordinary child cannot acquire an education if he or she does not frequent the institution where instruction is being furnished.

Yours sincerely,
CLAUDE LAWS.

North East Editorial

EDUCATION OF THE YOUNG

In and around us there have been prosecutions of parents for the non-attendance of children at school, and from all accounts there are likely to be more if the parents will not realize their responsibilities to their children and send them to school punctually and regularly. Besides being unfair to the young people, by depriving them of their chance of learning, this is manifestly unfair to the teacher, who is doing his or her best to prepare them for the battle of the future life. How can a teacher be blamed or criticised when the child is absent from school. Again what encouragement is there when the parents are so lackadaisical in sending the children regularly to school.

It seems that the Department is now waking up to this fact judging by their late actions. If our children are to be educated, and the ratepayers money spent to advantage there must be closer co-operation between teachers and parents. A desire on the part of the teacher to impart the necessary principles of education must be met by the parents desiring their children to benefit, by regularity and punctuality in attendance. Too much emphasis cannot be placed on regular attendance, and if parents will not attempt to conform to this, then they must be brought to book and made to realize how important a matter is regular attendance.

HOW CANADA IS GOVERNED

situational liberty set forth among other things:—

- 1. That it is illegal for the sovereign to suspend or execute laws without the consent of parliament.
- 2. That it is illegal for the sovereign to dispense with laws.
- 3. That it is illegal to levy money without the consent of parliament.
- 4. That petitions to parliament are legal and punishment for them illegal.
- 5. That parliamentary elections ought to be free.
- 6. That freedom of speech and debate in parliament is subject to parliamentary control only.
- 7. That parliaments ought to be frequently held.

STRENGTH OF PARLIAMENTARY GOVERNMENT

The great object of parliament is taxation in order to meet the needs of government. English sovereigns soon recognized the fact that to successfully raise the money that they required the people through their representatives in parliament must impose the taxes, the control of the expenditures of the realm was only acquired after a long struggle.

With the development of the principle of ministerial responsibility—the presence in parliament of a body of ministers responsible through the commons to the people—harmony was created between the executive and legislative departments.

The cabinet is now the connecting link between the monarch and the people through their representatives in parliament. As advisers of the crown, as heads of the great departments of state constituting the government, as the recognized heads of the political party or combination of parties having a majority in the commons, this cabinet, which is legally a committee of the privy council, is able to administer public affairs without that friction and conflict between executive and parliament which was the leading feature of old times of irresponsible councils and the personal rule of sovereigns.

When we come to consider the government of Canada we shall see carried out all the English methods and principles explained above. The king in council, the cabinet, the parliament, are all to be found working in Canada.

THE KING'S LABORIOUS DUTIES AS A SOVEREIGN

Although the king performs all executive acts through responsible ministers dependent on the will of parliament and people, it must not be supposed that his functions as a sovereign are purely ornamental.

On the contrary, so high an authority as Mr. Gladstone who was for many years a prime minister of Queen Victoria, has told us that "no head of a department performs more laborious duties than those which fall to the sovereign of this country." "No despatch" is received from abroad, nor any sent from the country, which is not submitted to the queen." Her signature has never been placed to any public document to which she did not approve."

Cabinet councils are reported and communicated on their termination by the minister to the sovereign and they often call for her remarks that are critical, and necessarily require considerable attention."

In fact "such complete mastery of what has occurred in this country, and of the great important subjects of state policy, foreign and domestic, for the last fifty years is possessed by the queen that he must be a wise man who could not profit by her judgement and experience."

To these explanations of the active life of a great sovereign it is well to add a fact not generally known to Canadians, that every governor-general is instructed to communicate directly to the king, from time to time, the fullest information on all questions of importance to Canada and the empire.

ORIGIN OF THE COURTS OF JUSTICE

We now come to the third division of government—the judicial authority

At the time of the Norman conquest justice was administered through local courts. The King and the Witan, or great council, of the Saxon sovereigns also heard and decided cases and appeals, but their jurisdiction was, as might have been expected in those primitive times, loose and ill defined.

The principal local courts were the shire-moot, or country court the sheriffs-tourn, the hundred-moot and the tyn-moot, which were presided over by the reeves of the shire, hundred and town respectively, the bishop also being a member of the country court.

After the Norman conquest the bishop withdrew from the county court and the power and jurisdiction of the court steadily declined.

William I. established and extended the judicial powers of the great council, consisting of the great officers of state, and added to these officers a number of justices or judges, and these justices were sent from time to time travelling through the kingdom, holding courts at the principal places administering civil and criminal justice. These justices in eyre (from "itineraria") had a most important effect in securing uniformity in the law of England.

With the increase in business courts were developed from the king's court or curia regis, namely the court of the king's bench, with jurisdiction over criminal matters, appeals from inferior courts, liberty of the subject, control of corporations and civil actions founded upon torts or wrongs, such as trespass, fraud, etc.

The common pleas, which had exclusive jurisdiction with respect to land and suits between private persons and the exchequer which had exclusive jurisdiction with respect to cases affecting the royal revenue.

From the lord chancellor, who was an officer of the curia regis, sprang the court of chancery. These courts at first accompanied the king, but it was provided by the Magna Carta that "common pleas" shall not follow our court, but shall be held in some fixed place." That fixed place was Westminster Hall, the great hall of the king's palace at Westminster.

The courts of king's bench and exchequer also finally settled at Westminster, the judges still going on circuit throughout the kingdom, but hearing cases on circuit by virtue of special commission. The judge and officers of the courts being paid by fees, the king's bench and exchequer by what is called legal fees, acquired jurisdiction in ordinary suits between private persons in order that they might increase their revenue. In the exchequer, for instance, the plaintiff said he was the king's debtor, and because the defendant would not pay him what he owed he was unable to pay his debt to the king, and the court would not allow his statement to be questioned. The judges originally held office during the king's pleasure, and there were many instances of judges being deprived of their offices because they did not do what the king required.

After James II. was driven from the throne the independence of the judges was protected by the Act of Settlement which provided that the judges were thenceforth to hold their offices during good behaviour, and under the British North America Act 1867, it is provided that the judges of the superior courts shall hold office during good behaviors, but shall be removable by the governor-general on the address of the senate and the house of commons. Such an address would only be passed for a very grave offence and after full investigation.

It is a matter for Canadians to be proud of that during the fifty years since Confederation there has been no occasion to invoke these powers. (to be continued in our next)
